We would like to thank the Native Counselling Service of Alberta, Canada, for sharing their innovative approach towards indigenous people and the criminal justice system, and for allowing us to adapt their recently developed manual Visions for our Future: A Crime Prevention Guide for Native Communities for Australian readers.

We would especially like to thank the Law Foundation of New South Wales for their generous sponsorship of the editing and final production stage of the video, Primary Prevention for Community Wellbeing which accompanies this manual; and the Department of Aboriginal Affairs for their part and encouragement in the development of this manual and video.

We are grateful to Jean Jans for her explanations of the CADAP approach (Community Approach to Drug Abuse Prevention Project) in the video. The primary prevention approach has been blended here with proposals for crime prevention.

Our gratitude is further extended to the National Campaign Against Drug Abuse, Alcohol and Drug Foundation, Department of Community Services and Health, Institute of Applied Aboriginal Studies and the Western Australian College of Advanced Education, Department for Community Welfare, the Health Department of Western Australia, and the West Australian Aboriginal and Islander Women's Congress for their assistance and for kindly allowing us to use poster materials as illustrations in the manual and video.

We especially thank the Aboriginal people for their comments and input into the development of this training package. Further comments may be addressed to:
